ABOUT Prague, Czech Republic

Prague, the capital of the Czech Republic and the enchanting Bohemia region, boasts over one million residents and is often called the “City of a Hundred Spires” or the “Golden City.” A UNESCO World Heritage site, it offers a fairy-tale atmosphere with its cobbled streets, stunning towers, and charming architecture. Visitors can explore beautifully decorated boutiques and savor traditional Czech cuisine, all while soaking in the city’s captivating Medieval ambiance.

Prague emerged as the heart of the Czech state, with rulers governing from the historic Prague Castle. The city thrived in the 14th century under Charles IV, King of Bohemia and Holy Roman Emperor, who expanded it significantly and founded a university that still bears his name today. This rich history makes Prague a must-visit destination.
